Thanks for your participation and/or interest in the “Physics Rocks” STEM Tour event held here at Edison on March 1, 2014. Team scores for the day’s challenges are provided here. We enjoyed having all of you!!!! Of special note were some team’s creative use of materials and outside the box thinking:

1. Several teams used a water activated chemical reaction to fill buoyancy balloons to lift their rocks from deep in the tank.
2. Successful flying rocks were achieved with devices that minimized air resistance on the way up, but maximized it on the way down. Some teams created devices that used the force of the launch to get rid of required weight so the “parachute” had less work to do.
3. Swinging rock devices knocked out more than one target at a time.
4. Scores recorded later in the day were generally higher than early attempts....it’s a good idea to watch others fail and to practice a lot!!

As you may or may not know; First, Second, and Third place winners from this event earn points towards the overall STEM Tour point total and those results are available at the STEM tour website (<http://www.chamberswfl.com/stem/>). The final event of this year’s Tour offers participation points toward the STEM Tour points but no additional competition points. Be sure to attend FGCU’s Solar Go Cart Race on
