We have had 4 sessions and each one has been a little different depending on the attendees and their majors. The way we have been doing them (and it seems to be working) is the following:

Students sign in with ID# and major.

I send that list to advising for an advisor to run a degree audit.

While that is happening, I give some general information including Why we are having these meetings.

“We want to be sure that you are on track for completion of your degree in a timely manner”

“We want to be sure that when a potential employer looks at your transcript, they see courses with the skills they want their employees to have.”

I give them a copy of the education plan for their major and a copy of the AA plan.

I tell them that no matter their degree, it is divided into parts: General Education – no leeway unless it says Social Science elective, etc. That is when I use the AA plan to point out what is acceptable for social science, general ed math, etc.

I tell them that the Career Core has no leeway. The courses that are listed are the courses they must take.

If their degree has electives, I show them that it usually says at the bottom if those are specific electives.

I try to include the importance of prerequisites and the grades required – GPA – etc.

I answer questions they have. Some have wanted to change their degree. We have the blank forms and a new ed plan to give them.

Then we try to answer specific questions for their degree. Sessions have run from one hour to one hour and 45 minutes. Then if we need to bring them back to our office to give an override, put in the graduation approval, or anything else we do that.

So far, they have been positive and receptive to the sessions.

Hope this helps. Please let me know what worked for you.
